Love, Dear: —

Just received your answer to my Tuesday's letter, which you ans. on Friday. Love, the very fact that you say you were happy has made me so happy this morning. Everything seems so rosy this morning and I hope it will continue so. I am actually afraid to breathe for fear I shall break the charm.

And about that fellow you are teaching! Love, I am so happy! I, too, only wish you were with me, and then my happiness would be complete. The dear and everyone are so nice to you — I am just envious to meet them all.

Yesterday, after I got through at the Hosp. I took a run home and bought up some pretty material for a few dresses. I used that check that I spoke to you about. Love, it makes me all excited when I get these things - it makes me feel just as I did when I picked out my wedding clothes. Happy! All because I see preparation are started toward my trip and towards my being with you. All last night I dreamt of how I was going to make them, and how they would look, and wondered if they would turn out nicely - if you would like them and a hundred other things. As soon as I come down, I want to meet all these people that you write of - the Dean, Mr + Mrs. Lagharr, your uncle, Mr. + Mrs. Gould - Mr. Solomon - everybody! - and I want to look nice so that you will not feel ashamed of me - And —— so that you will say that I look pretty and love me. Just the getting of the material and your wonderful letter has made me wonderfully happy. There is a lot of hard work before me - the sewing - but dear, it all means you at the end -

Wasn't it strange that, I, too, should picked out the same sort of furniture for our future little home? It will indeed be pretty and I am wishing to be there to fix up everything. Great minds run in the same channel - "Heaven"! how conceited I am getting! And who, dear, is going to greet you when you come home at night, who, love is going to kiss and hug you? And who is going to be very, very happy? Don't the time seem real short to you, too?

Now, of course I shall come whenever you are ready for me! My teeth, dear, I must manage to have done here. The filling in the front tooth is half and and looks badly. Besides, love, I feel that in with my expenses and don't want you to worry about it. I am trying to get as much as I possibly can as far as clothes are concerned, so that for some time, anyway, I shan't have to trouble about getting things to wear. This will keep our expenses down a little – as I sure am going to be economical in the beginning – at least as far as clothes and such things are concerned.

Nell is in a frantic rush, getting her things together. In less than a short weeks she shall be off. I'm very, I hope to be travelling southward, too.

Dear, don't I know that every word you write, is written with sincerity? As to how much you love me, I am going to make you prove that to me when I come down. Oh dear — when will it be? The old feeling of lonesomeness and longing is coming back – but, I am still keeping my stiff lip. To-day I am happier than I have been in some time. I do so love you precious love you more than I could even put down on paper – love you with a love which is indescribable. Keep on being happy, precious and take good good care of my precious hubby. Your ever loving
